

Together we are slowing the spread of infection.

This summer will be different. To allow as many people as possible to enjoy it safely, Sweden's businesses, organisations and activity coordinators have an important role to play.

We know that many of you are doing your best to manage Covid-19 risks and that, as an organisation, you are taking significant responsibility for putting measures in place to reduce the spread of the disease. To help you in these efforts, we have put together a checklist and information, along with examples of effective measures you can take.

The checklist is based on you as an organisation assessing how your activity is affected and what you need to do to limit the spread of infection.

The final page provides further information, links to good examples and information material that you can download and use in your organisation.

Checklist.

As someone running a business, you are responsible for making adjustments so that your employees, visitors and customers can follow Swedish authorities' guidelines and advice. You should do the following:

- ✓ Carry out a risk assessment and put measures in place to reduce the spread of infection.
- ✓ Establish instructions and procedures – and train your personnel in these.
- ✓ Inform visitors and customers about the rules in place.
- ✓ Ensure that your premises does not become crowded.
- ✓ Ensure that there are facilities for people to wash their hands with soap and water – or provide hand sanitiser.
- ✓ Ensure an appropriate level of cleaning of surfaces and areas that are in frequent use.

Everyone wants a safe summer. Here's how you can help reduce crowding.

Coronavirus spreads when people are in close proximity to each other. A number of organisations have asked for detailed guidelines on how they should adapt their businesses to limit the spread of infection. The main rule is that people need to keep their distance and wash their hands. So concentrate on avoiding situations where crowding can occur, rather than specifying how many people can be in a particular premises or area at the same time. For example: a shop may be very large but there may be crowding at the checkouts. Signs on the floor or a ticketed queuing system makes it easier for customers to keep their distance from each other.

At msb.se you will find information material such as posters, pavement signs and table signs that you can download and use in your organisation.
